Introduction

This factsheet looks to give the facts that a person would need to know in order to run traditional rafting activities for a group of young people. It should be read in conjunction with the factsheet FS120084 Scout Led Activities Index, and Policy, Organisation and Rules (POR) of The Scout Association.

What is Traditional Rafting?

The use of man made raft, often constructed through the use of barrels, poles and rope using pioneering techniques, to travel across water. The raft is usually powered by single bladed paddles, however other methods of propulsion, such as a sail, can also be used.

What is a Traditional Rafting Permit?

The adventurous activity permit scheme is designed to ensure that only people with the relevant skills and experience lead adventurous activities for young people. Therefore all activities classed as adventurous can only be lead by someone holding the appropriate permit.

A Traditional Rafting permit is required for all Traditional Rafting taking place except in class C water. Definitions of water classifications can be found in POR.

Types of Permits

Traditional Rafting permits can be issued for any class of water. Each class of permit can be further restricted (such as through venue etc) to end up with an individual permit to the level of the competence and requirements of an Applicant.

Within each class of water it is possible to get a permit to lead or a permit to supervise.

Permit Limitations

If you have a permit to lead Traditional Rafting activities then you can look after a maximum of three rafts at a time, subject to any restrictions on your permit, and need to remain on the water with these rafts at all times.

A permit to supervise Traditional Rafting activities allows you to supervise one or more group of rafts from a suitable distance. You remain responsible for all the groups you are supervising, but can designate someone with the appropriate skills to be the leader of each group.

Definition of Supervision

If you hold a permit to supervise Traditional Rafting activities then you can supervise up to three groups. All supervised groups should be within communication range of the permit holder who will need to be in or have immediate access to a rescue craft. The permit holder remains responsible for all groups at all times.

Designations

When supervising other groups the holder of a Traditional Rafting supervisor permit needs to designate a leader for each group. This designation lasts only for the current activity while the permit holder is supervising.

People designated as group leaders should have the necessary skills and be responsible enough to control the boat safely in the waters that they are in. There is no problem with making young people group leaders if they are up to the role, and it can be used as a useful development tool.
